

Advertisement

HFCS and Sugar:
The Facts Every Marketer Needs

May 25 | 2PM EDT

Register Now!

Dispatches From the eG8
Michael Wolff reports from the internet summit in Paris

Secret World of Apps
Inside the convoluted Apple approval process

Sure Shot
Ron Howard wants your photos to inspire a short film

THE PRESS
TELEVISION
TECHNOLOGY
ADVERTISING & BRANDING
ADFREAK VIDEO

Headlines:
Press: Ratings Drop for Limbaugh, Han...
TV: Oprah Finale Poised for Mammoth...
Tech: LinkedIn Marketing Costs Are N...
Ads & Brands: Mobile Ad Targeting Still A Di...

Ad of the Day: Canon Ron Howard asks for your photos to inspire a short film

By Noreen O'Leary

May 24 2011

Advertising & Branding

Like

12

Share

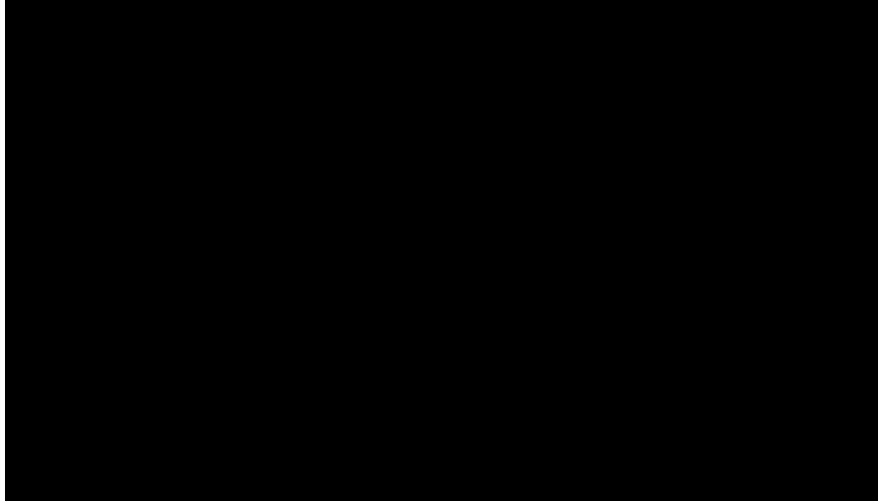

0

Film director Ron Howard supposedly hasn't appeared in a TV ad since he was 18 and has never associated himself strongly with any brand. He's not one of those big-name directors who shoot lucrative commercials on the sly. So, why is he now fronting for Canon? Turns out the Oscar winner is curious about how consumers can help create art, the idea at the center of Canon's new "Project Imagin8ion" initiative, which launched on May 22. The site invites people to submit their photos, of which a handful will be selected to suggest eight film elements—setting, time, character, mood, relationship, goal, obstacle and the unknown. Using the eight images as inspiration, Howard will create a short film that will debut in New York next November, where Howard's photographic muses will meet the director. (In the first two days alone, Canon received more than 9,000 submissions. Consumers have until June 14 to provide images.) The campaign also has a strong social/photo-sharing component that includes YouTube, Flickr, Facebook and Twitter. While the underlying message supports Canon's digital SLR cameras, the execution takes the focus off the marketer and shifts it to user creativity. Not a bad idea to engender that product goodwill in an era where most consumers already carry a phone camera in their pockets.

Advertisement

CREDITS

Client: Canon USA

Agency: Grey, New York

Spot: "Parade"

Chief Creative Officer: Tor Myhren

Executive Creative Directors: Ari Halper, Steve Krauss

Associate Creative Directors: Stu Mair, Eric King

Writer: Kent Koren

Art Director: Elinor Buchler

Logo Design: Craig Ward

Agency Producer: Lauren Tuttman

Agency Music Producer: Zachary Pollakoff

Digital Producer: Kristin Finch, Jen Meeker,

Digital Team: Lando Ettrick, Ron Ceballos, Ornette Coleman, Josh Hearn, Liz Polkinghorne, Thomas Kropp

Account: Rick Cusato, Melinda Hecht, Melanie Rose, Lindsey Christensen, Matt Rakow

Planning: Ian Daly

Business Manager: Lynn Schieder

Talent Manager: Carla Defeo

Alliance: Amy Tunick, Eric Levin, Courtney Jacobs, Jennifer Gothelf

Topics: Ad of The Day, Canon, Grey, Creative, Agency

About the Author

Noreen O'Leary is a staff writer for Adweek. Follow Noreen O'Leary at noreenoleary.